CAR OVERTURNS, DRIVER DIES IN HOSPITAL HERE

B. F. Deible, 65, of New Middleton, Is Victim of Mishap

LOSES CONTROL OF AUTOMOBILE

Car Bursts Into Flames As Deible Is Thrown From Seat

A resident of New Middleton, O., died at 5:07 p. m. Monday in City hospital after he was found lying on a highway near Columbiana when his automobile, after overturning in the middle of the road.

The man, later identified as B. F. Deible, 65, was brought to Salem City hospital by a Leontia grocer who found him on route 164, one mile north of Columbiana. Grocer Ewinger first took Deible to the office of Dr. H. H. Bookwalter and then to the hospital where he died of a fractured skull.

State patrolmen of the Salem barracks who investigated the mishap said that Deible was killed when he seemingly lost control of his Ford coupe and crashed into a guard rail, rebounding to the other side of the road and then overturning. The victim, in the meanwhile, had been thrown from the car, which caught fire. The machine was a complete loss.

Deible was alone in the car.

F.D.R. Will Welcome Civil War Veteran Who Knew Lincoln

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—The White House door was left ajar to only one visitor today as President Roosevelt led the nation in observance of Abraham Lincoln's birthday.

William Henry Gilbert, 93, of York, Pa., only surviving member of the detail that guarded the bier of the great emancipator in Philadelphia, planned to don his worn blue uniform and call on the chief executive.

"Sort of scared" by the fuss made over his trip to Washington, the Civil war veteran was determined to steady himself and give Mr. Roosevelt the same smart salute accorded President Lincoln when he first saw him "many years ago."

The round of activities arranged for the old soldier included an address to veterans at Walter Reed hospital, laying of a wreath on the tomb of the unknown soldier and a talk over a national radio hook-up.

Moral to Burglars— Don't Sneeze When The Search Is On

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 12.—Two Philadelphia policemen are grateful for a sneeze.

They were searching a second floor stockroom of an automobile accessory store for two burglars and couldn't find them.

Then they heard a sneeze over the heads and found two men crouching on the rafters. They were booked as William Kane, 23, and Norman Balbow, 22.

O'Brien Replaced By Dayton Woman On Control Board

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS, Feb. 12.—The feminine viewpoint now will be represented on the Ohio liquor control board.

Mrs. Edith McClure Patterson, a leader in Dayton club and educational affairs, today prepared to step into a man-size job on the board that directs the state's wide-flung liquor monopoly.

"The entire liquor question relates so closely to the home and concerns the well being of wives and children that it seemed to me the viewpoint of a woman and a mother ought to find expression on the liquor board," Governor Davey said yesterday in announcing Mrs. Patterson's appointment.

Mrs. Patterson, a Republican, replaces George J. O'Brien of Alliance, another Republican, whose term expired Feb. 4. He was an original member of the four-man board. Mrs. Patterson's term is four years.

The governor said that Lockwood Thompson of Cleveland, whose board term also has expired, has agreed to serve at least another month.

Mrs. Patterson entered the congressional race against Congressman Byron Horlan of the third district last fall, but was defeated. She was the first Republican woman ever to run for congress in Ohio.

She is widely known in club and educational circles, having served as a director of the state and national federations of women's clubs, the Ohio Daughters of the American Revolution, and the Ohio Parent-Teacher congress.

BUSINESS FEAR ALLAYED BY U.S.

Morgenthau Tells Nation Not to Worry About Gold Verdict

By CHAS. F. SHAEFFER, Associated Press Staff Writer.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—As the world watched to see if the supreme court would take advantage of this legal holiday to deliver the gold clause decision, the Roosevelt administration sought to reassure business about the dollar's future in foreign exchange.

An unprecedented announcement made by Secretary Morgenthau last night was interpreted as an attempt to remove business nervousness lest it unsettle trade.

Morgenthau Speaks
Casting aside a mask of secrecy for the first time since the treasury's stabilization fund was created Jan. 31, 1934, Morgenthau said the $2,000,000,000 had been used and would be used to manage American currency abroad.

The statement recalled frequent reports that the administration has been preparing to meet any adverse decision with measures designed to steady the dollar and keep it from jumping disastrously.

Meanwhile there was nothing to indicate whether the high court would choose today or some other day to say whether the administration acted constitutionally in voiding the clause calling for the payment of $100,000,000 in securities with gold or its equivalent.

Some thought today would be a good day because American markets are closed. Others thought a Saturday would be better. If the decision should come on a day other than Saturday, the stabilization fund conceivably might have a job to do before dawn the next day, some observers thought, for markets abroad open as early as 4 a. m. Eastern Standard time.

See F. D. R. Victory

The attitude expressed by administration officials is one of confident expectation that the new deal monetary policy will be upheld, and Morgenthau reminded reporters yesterday that he had not mentioned the word "court" in any official utterance.

But there was no mistaking that he had the excitement about the gold cases in mind when he said:

"The country can go about its business with assurance that we are prepared to manage the external value of the dollar as long as may be necessary."

The word "assurance" was underscored in the official copies of the statement. When pressed for details, Morgenthau said with a smile: "I spent a lot of time composing that sentence. Please don't make me change it."

GOVERNMENTAL ECONOMY ASKED BY FARM UNITS

Resolutions Presented To State Representative W. R. Phillips

DIVERSION OF GAS, LICENSE FEES HIT

Sales Tax Exemption On Feed, Seeds, Fertilizer Demanded

Resolutions concerning proposed legislation of special interest to farmers of Columbiana county have been presented to State Representative W. R. Phillips following a joint meeting of the legislation and taxation committees of the County Farm Bureau and the Pomona grange held in Lisbon Saturday, February 9. The reason for each of the proposals was explained by the committee members. Following are the resolutions adopted at the joint meeting and presented to Mr. Phillips.

Taxes

In view of the fact that the voters of Ohio have adopted the 10 mill limitations in assessments on real estate for Ohio, we advocate, first, that the strictest economy be enforced in the operation of government, local, municipal and state, and second, that:

(a) A personal earned income tax law be adopted.

(b) Since feeds, seeds, fertilizers, machinery, and such supplies are used in the production of farm products, we ask an amendment to the present sales tax law to give the farmer the right as the manufacturer in the exemption of articles and supplies used in the production or manufacture of farm products. We also ask exemption for products of the farm sold on the farm for fruit growers, florists and nurserymen.

Highways

We oppose any diversion of the gas tax or license fees collected on motor vehicles for other than road purposes.

We favor the complete elimination of future road assessments except in cases where two-thirds of the land owners and two-thirds of the acreage affected agree to such assessments.

We urge that part of the FERA funds be used for improving local township roads under direction and supervision of county and township officials.

We demand lower license fees for farm owned trucks used for private farm business only.

Livestock Disease

We assert it to be the right of farmers individually or cooperatively to purchase hog cholera virus from reputable manufacturers operating under government supervision to be administered by the individual to his own hogs.

We favor the continuation of adequate appropriations for the maintenance of tuberculosis-free accredited counties in Ohio.

We approve the plan now being put into effect for the elimination of cattle by areas that are found

Salem Debaters End Season by Winning From E. Palestine

Salem High school's affirmative debate squad, composed of Zoa Slutz Helen Thompson and Mildred Woods, ended its season Monday night by defeating the East Palestine High school negative team on a question pertaining to federal aid to education.

The Salem debaters finished their season with four victories and two defeats, a good record in view of the lack of veterans on the team this year. Canton and Newton Falls debaters are leading the district.

George McClelland, Ravenna clerk of courts, was the judge last night for the debate which was held in room 206 at the high school.

Sound Fire Alarm And Then Rob Store

LISBON, Feb. 12.—Robbery of the general store of Daniel Reilly at Summitville has been reported at the office of Sheriff Frank Ballantine, the loot consisting of about $43 in cash and two endorsed checks, one for $10.50 and one for $7.75.

A stranger is said to have entered the store and informed the owner of a fire near his place of business. When the stranger and the owner went outside, an accomplice entered the store and emptied the cash register.

A small brush fire in the rear of the store is believed to have been started by the thieves.

Auto Overturned

LISBON, Feb. 12.—A new automobile owned by Clyde Huntington, West Point, was damaged when it upset while rounding a curve at Spencer's corner on the Lincoln highway two miles south of here, Sunday evening. Occupants of the car were slightly bruised.

F.D.R. AND A.F.L. WILL STAND PAT

Meet In White House; "Must Have Patience", Says President

By JOSEPH F. MILLER, Associated Press Staff Writer.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—President Roosevelt and A. F. of L. leaders, after swapping opinions in an amicable White House conference, apparently were determined today to stand by their conflicting views on such things as the 30-hour week, work relief wages and auto labor elections.

They exchanged pleasant greetings late yesterday at a meeting at which the union leaders voiced their desires and the President said:

"Must Have Patience"

"My impression is that our difficulties are found largely in the heretofore totally unorganized field, both as it affects employers and employees. In such cases we must have patience."

"The federal government," he said at another point, "has indicated through the national industrial recovery act its desire that labor and management organize for the purpose of collective bargaining and the furtherance of industrial peace and prosperity, but the federal government cannot, of course, undertake to compel employees and employers to organize. It should be a voluntary organization."

The President spoke of the American Federation of Labor as "one of the great and outstanding institutions of the country," while the A. F. of L. executive council, led by President William Green, sub-

Four Souls With Single Thought — 'I Hope It's Warm'

When Legionnaires of the Tenth district meet in Wooster March 17 for their annual conference, someone is going to lose his pants.

There is a possibility, too, that three of the boys may be cavorting around in their shorts.

And just to be on the safe side, although he insists he can't possibly lose, one of these three intends to wear bright-striped shorts, the two or three hundred who gaze upon this little sight of the conference cannot miss the entertainment.

It's all a part of a wager, and the boys mean business.

Recently Wilbur S. Mellinger of Leontia, commander of the Second division; Harold W. Silleck of Canton, heading the Third division, and John Carver of Strasburg, in charge of the First division, issued a challenge to their district commander, Clyde Stauch, of Steubenville.

The commander wasn't afraid of losing his pants, so he accepted.

Result: If the three divisions receive a higher percentage of membership than Commander Stauch's home post at Steubenville as the conference in Wooster opens on Sunday, March 17, the said commander is duty bound by the wager to turn his pants over to the winners and preside in his shorts.

And if the commander should win—but of course the three division chiefs say it's just impossible for their superior officer to win.

In the meantime the privates in the rear rank are chuckling in anticipation of a great field day, for someone is sure to be razed, and in this instance it won't be the private.

Sons Of Legion Enroll 36 At Public Ceremonies Here

Youth Being Prepared to Carry On Organization's Work When Legionnaires Leave Off

Thirty-six boys became charter members of a squadron of the Sons of the Legion at an impressive public ceremony conducted by members of Charles H. Carey post No. 56, American Legion, at the Memorial building Monday night.

The membership list of this squadron, the first to be organized in Columbiana county and the second in the Tenth district, contains the names of 37 boys, but one was unable to attend.

Fathers and mothers of the boys and other interested Salemites and Legionnaires from Alliance, Lisbon, Leontia, East Liverpool, Steubenville and other cities in the district formed the large group of spectators.

Riddle Is Chairman

As they gathered, the Salem Community band played several selections, under the able leadership of Raymond Bartholomew. At intervals during the evening, serving as part of the ceremonies, the band played, and for its efforts it won generous applause and much favorable comment after the program had been concluded.

In opening the program, Commander Ross S. Helman of Charles H. Carey post introduced Atty Lynn

Health Department Lists Births, Deaths

City Health Commissioner R. T. Holzbach reported today that during January 25 births were recorded against 16 deaths. The births according to ward were: First ward, five; Second ward, six; Third, two, and Fourth, 12.

Of the deaths, six were male and 10 female. The deaths, according to wards, were: First ward, one; Second, two; Third, two, and Fourth, 11. The highest death rate was noted of persons between 60 and 70 years. Seven died at that age. Two persons, one past 70 and the other past 80, died. Two between the ages of 50 and 60 succumbed, as did two others between the ages of 20 and 30. One death was a baby under one month. The other two were stillborn babies.

Measles led the list of communicable diseases reported by Dr. Holzbach. Eight cases were reported during the month. Other cases included: Chicken-pox, three; broncopneumonia, tuberculosis and scarlet fever, one each.

Orders Welfare Director To Accept His Resignation

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 12.—Governor Davey today directed Mrs. Margaret Allman, his director of welfare, to accept the resignation of W. F. Amrine, as superintendent of the London prison farm. He asserted Amrine's tendered resignation contained an "implied challenge, 'I dare you to accept.'"

The governor instructed Mrs. Allman to accept the resignation on March 1, or sooner if Mr. Davey desires.

Amrine, head of the London prison farm for ten years, submitted his resignation last week in protest against a reiterated order from Mrs. Allman that he require employees of the farm to specify their politics in a questionnaire submitted to them by the welfare director.

"No man is indispensable," Davey said in a statement, announcing his action.

He contended Amrine's action in making public his offer to resign before the letter was received by Mrs. Allman was a discourtesy.

Mahoning Auditor Loses In Ruling On Sebring Dispute

YOUNGSTOWN, Feb. 12.—Judge David G. Jenkins criticized both County Auditor John J. Arnold and the Smith township board of education today in a decision handed down in the board's suit to collect $5,000 from Arnold.

The judge ruled that the county auditor is liable for the $5,000 and must pay it to the board. An insurance company, The Hartford Accident & Indemnity Co. was a party defendant with Arnold.

Money Deposited

The $5,000 was deposited with the Citizens Banking Co. of Sebring to the board's credit, Aug. 18, 1931. The bank closed in October, with the money still on deposit. Arnold had paid the money as an advance on taxes due the board and deposited it after bank officials told him the board's funds were low.

Judge Jenkins found that under the law the auditor should not pay the money to the board until requested to do so by resolution. The judge found the payment, lacking such a resolution, was not proper.

While ruling in favor of the board, Judge Jenkins criticized the board's "laxity" for failing to watch its accounts carefully, and suggested that a situation of this kind "may be avoided by this and other public bodies hereafter."

In asking for the entire $5,000 the board declared that the bank is wholly insolvent and in their opinion would pay no dividend.

Charges Defense Is Financed By Cranks, Idiots, Fools

DEFENSE LINDY IN MEMORY TEST

Freeing Prisoner Would Be Greatest Crime Jury Is Warned

By WILLIAM A. KINNEY (Copyright, 1935, By The Associated Press.)

FLEMINGTON, N. J., Feb. 12.—The state, bringing the murder trial of Bruno Richard Hauptmann toward its end today, charged the defense was financed by "cranks, idiots and fools," called Hauptmann "public enemy No. 1 of this world," and asked the jury to show no mercy.

"Crime of the Century"

"This murder of the Lindbergh child," cried Attorney General David T. Wilentz, "would shrink into absolute insignificance in comparison to the crime that would be committed if this man were freed. That would be the crime of the century."

"To let him roam the streets of this country and make every woman in her home shudder again, that would be a real tragedy, an American tragedy."

The attorney general characterized the Bronx carpenter, who is accused of kidnapping and murdering Baby Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr., an "animal lower than the lowest form in the animal kingdom."

He contended the testimony of Dr. John F. Jafese Condon, ransom intermediary who said he paid Hauptmann the money, was enough to convict Hauptmann of first degree murder.

"Why, if that was the only thing the state had," he said, "if we didn't have another thing, except this man Condon saying 'there is the fellow I gave the money to,' that would be all we would need to convict him of murder in the first degree."

Called An Egomaniac

He also answered the charge of Edward J. Reilly, who said the state was trying to make Hauptmann out as both a master mind and a fool, by saying the accused was an "egomaniac. Only Hauptmann's egotism, the attorney general argued, would cause him to think he could talk to Condon without a mask."

The prosecutor defended vigorously Lindbergh's identification of Hauptmann's voice in the cemetery rendezvous.

"Lindy, whose ears were trained to the hum and whirr of every little wheel in that motor that went across the ocean, Lindy whose very life has been built up by that keen intellect and keen training and keen mind and keen hearing, Lindbergh with that keen hearing when he was out in that plot, the greatest moment of his life, he could almost touch him; then that voice comes out 'hey dok-ter,' they dok-ter God! Could you ever forget it? Would anybody ever forget it?"

"A Weird Voice"

"Why, if that man said one word in this room above a whisper I wouldn't have to look around, I could tell you it was Hauptmann. There is a different quality. There

THE SPIRIT AND THE LETTER

If all the justice were on one side of the issue over the child labor amendment, friends of the measure would have been vindicated a decade ago. They would not need to be striving so desperately for ratification now, taking advantage of a spirit of reform which seems more vigorous than usual.

No American dares claim the right to exploit children in sweatshops. This is the specific evil which the amendment would eradicate. It is a cause deserving of great enthusiasm, and it has been given all the enthusiasm it deserves. The real question with reference to the child labor amendment is: Would the amendment abolish exploitation of child labor in sweatshops? Would it be practical?

Perhaps a few of those who give negative answers are afraid of the amendment for selfish reasons. A greater number by far is opposed to the amendment because it does not represent a reasonable addition to the fundamental law of the United States. It would give the federal government power to control the economic activities of all persons under 18 years of age, a third of the country's population.

But the power, say friends of the amendment, would not be exercised unreasonably. Why, if it is not going to be exercised, should the power be bestowed? Furthermore, if it is true that the national industrial recovery act has eradicated child labor in sweatshops, why should an effective statutory law be transferred to the Constitution?

Nearly all states have laws against exploitation of child labor. Great difficulty in enforcement of these laws has been encountered, but apparently the recovery act has been effective, according to the claims of its administrators. If it has been effective, well and good. It can continue to make life safe for children whom necessity has driven into the clutches of ruthless employers. If it hasn't been effective and if state laws weren't effective, what could be gained by the child labor amendment to the Constitution. The amendment has been the beneficiary of zeal which would better have been applied to more sensible methods of child protection.

WHEN DELAY ISN'T IRRITATING

Reasons for the supreme court's delay in ruling on the gold cases are conjectural. The most obvious, and probably the correct, explanation is that the court is having difficulty in deciding the question. The court is assured to be above maneuvering for time.

It is one case, however, in which delay isn't irritating. In fact, it is wholesome. The country has had time to prepare itself for whatever opinion may be given. There seems no possibility of panic as a result.

Incidentally, pending judgment, the supreme court's prestige is increasing measurably. Accustomed to the quick tempo of new deal legislation and ruthless destruction of all obstacles in its path, the country cannot help but be impressed with the fact that nine elderly men are granted the right to give a decision which might be contrary to an administration used to having its own way.

Even the probability an adverse decision would be overcome by new legislation does not affect the court's position. In the past it sometimes has gained prestige eventually through temporary unpopularity. Had it always been favorable to those who looked to it for vindication of their acts it would not be enjoying its present remarkable reputation for independence.

Delay in the gold cases may be the result of difficulty in giving a ruling favorable to the administration, a possibility generally overlooked by commentators. It is not reasonable to assume that if the administration were to be upheld a decision could be reached more quickly than if the complainants in the gold cases were to be upheld.

THE STARSAY

For Wednesday, February 13

A particularly lively, active, enterprising and progressive day is foretold from the positions of major planets, both by lunar and mutual aspect. There will be keen response to high stimuli to initiative and aggressiveness in the launching of new projects, and this will be backed up by an indomitable will to succeed through industry, application and perseverance.

Those whose birthday it is stand at the threshold of large opportunity during the year, for launching cherished new projects, stabilizing the fortunes by industry, diligence and practical measures.

A child born on this day may be unusually talented, versatile and progressive, with success attending its practical projects, creative powers and faithful application to its business.

Notable nativity: Bulwer Lytton, novelist.

O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Feb. 12—A letter: "Novelists and the movies would likely twist my New York career into the usual sob-sister finish—a frail form dredged out of the dark waters of the Hudson. The fact is I've flirted with danger for three years and am going back home a good-bad girl."

"That is, I learned to drink and smoke and become shock proof without indulging the major vices. I have about $80 over bus fare home. I arrived here out of college full of the usual hope, lived in a carefully protected girls' club and wrote this from a shabby room of a questionable hotel.

"I have my regrets but no alibis. I am a product of the era, what your Broadway would call a slick little chiseler. I know how to get a first class dinner and often a $10 bill in exchange for nothing more than one of those push-away kisses in a taxi going home.

"What I have lost in self respect, I have gained in worldly knowledge that may yet give me a break. I thought one of the finest fellows in my town was a country town slow poke. But after being pawed by the perfumed New York bred, I think he's an angel. And I'm wishing he'll ask me again to marry."

Twilight brings wistful dreamers to Central Park benches. They sit silently and seemingly lost in the illimitable wonder of the open sky, trees and entrancing skylines. If it rains they bring umbrellas. Youth is there as well as middle age and sometimes the very old. Perhaps among them is another O. Henry, a Dean Cornwell or Eugene Walter. For they were among the army of city bewildered who fled to the parks in formative days to map out their campaigns of conquest. And won!

Katherine Brush is another addition to the distinguished list of litterateurs who have added fame to the old seaport town of Newburyport, Mass. Her father was long head-master of a private academy there. Edmund Pearson, of the New York Public Library, who turns out the authentic murder stories, is also from the town. J. P. Marquand spent considerable of his boyhood there. Catherine Tinsley, the writer on theosophy, was long known by townfolk as "that woman."

The output of writers has always interested me for it so often appears the frailest are the most prolific. There is Octavius Roy Cohen down in Birmingham, for instance. He began writing in 1912. Since then he has written and had published 1400 short stories, 38 books, 33 motion pictures, a radio series and a comic strip. Cohen goes to his study at precisely 8 a. m. every day and remains there until 1 p. m. Nothing jousts him out of this routine. Off hours he's a movie fan.

New York's worldiest block remains that one on West 47th between Broadway and Sixth avenue. Habitués call it Malaria Alley, likely because of the drowsiness from dawn until mid-day. It is sardine-packed with that curious, furtive humanity that talks out of the side of the mouth, the wise guys in on everything but have to scrape for the morning sinker and java. After midnight the sidewalk jostle has its quota of ladies with ostrich plumed mules an nutria coats over negligees airing the canine favorite of such areas—the pink eyed white poodle. The crepuscular hotel patrons have a way of standing about the entrances as long as possible as though dreading the exile of cheerless rooms. Bell boys are on the go to quick lunches for pitchers of beer, coffee and hamburger. Now and then a gyp cab rolls up with percentage and blotto fares. Yet with all its hard living, Malaria Alley is singularly free of crimes passionel. Its derelictions are chiefly cheap amours, shady petty connivings and sundry trickeries of the easy going grifters the world over. The tipster railing sheets have their biggest circulation per capita there—which may explain a lot.

It was Malaria Alley that a writer—Charles MacArthur as I recall—was asked to describe for a Hollywood scenario. He wired this brief philippic: "Nude-Lewd-Rude-Stewed."

"One Eye" Connelly sends his biography, a pamphlet reprinting newspaper comments on his cheery career. His headquarters are now in Dayton, O. At 60, he's still practising his dubious art and seeing the world. One wonders if he's made any crashing plans about the final gate. That one is reputedly not so easy.

Heart Disease in Child Often Mild

Heart disease continues to take its annual toll of lives. Many of these tragedies could be prevented if adequate measures were taken at the onset of the disease. Every effort must be made to give the young sufferer, particularly, the very best of care and treatment.

Unfortunately the very words "heart disease" usually arouse much alarm. It is true, of course, that some cases of heart disease are serious and require rigid supervision and care. But many are of a mild nature, and with simple care and precaution need cause no anxiety.

For example, heart "murmur" in a child should not be interpreted as a serious heart disease. Parents are often unduly alarmed when they are told their child has a heart murmur. Heart murmurs in children are frequently heard during an acute illness; they are the result of certain changes in the blood and muscle action of the heart. In most instances this type of murmur is temporary and soon disappears.

Of course, heart murmur may occur as a result of some definite change in the structure of the valves of the heart. When the valves become infected and thickened they are unable to close completely. This permits some blood to pass through one chamber to another. This disorder is spoken of as an "organic murmur," more commonly known as "leaking valve."

Correct Infections
A child afflicted with organic murmur but whose heart muscle has good tone should not be made an invalid or unnecessarily restricted in his activities. Moderate exercise is permissible.

Bear in mind that the heart requires no special treatment other than care of the general health of the child. Adequate hours of rest, relaxation and abundance of fresh air and sunlight are recommended for these children. All centers of infection, such as diseased teeth, nasal sinuses, adenoids and tonsils must be given attention.

The diet should be varied and contain an abundance of fresh fruits, vegetables, cereals, milk, cream, butter and eggs. During the winter months cod liver oil should be added to the diet.

Many of the organic murmurs can be traced to neglect in the treatment of the so-called infectious diseases of childhood. For example, diphtheria, scarlet fever and acute rheumatic fever, often leave the young sufferer with some defect in the valves of the heart. These dreaded complications should always be guarded against.

Early recognition of infections of the heart means prompt care and treatment. When this is accomplished the amount of damage to the heart is minimized. Serious heart defects of adult life will be prevented and the young sufferer will develop into a strong, sturdy and useful citizen.

"THE LADY DANCES" by MARGE STANLEY

CHAPTER XX

He ascended the stairs to the upper hall. A dim light shone beneath the door of a room half-way down the corridor that must of necessity be Vanya's quarters, since the other two girls were still downstairs. Shown's room was on the ground floor, and Hong slept, if he slept at all, Heaven knew where. He paused at the door; probably had no more luck than his own, he thought.

"Trial by Fire!" he murmured, and rapped sharply on the panel.

"Yes!" called a voice—Vanya's voice!

He deliberately turned the knob; the door gave and he stepped in. Vanya looked up in startled surprise as he closed the door behind him. He glanced about the room, very similar, save for the single window, to his own—furnished with a narrow bed, a single straight chair, a bureau with a mirror, and a wooden wash-stand with a pitcher and basin. Vanya sat on the bed, with the long evening gown she had worn the preceding night crumpled in her lap; she was apparently mending it. The single chair was bedecked with a scanty litter of other clothes.

The girl, as she stared wide-eyed at Mark's unceremonious entrance, still wore the tattered costume of her last dance; in the room's heat she had discarded the flowered robe across the foot of the bed. She sprang to her feet and reached for it as if to drape it about her semi-revealed figure.

"You again!" she exclaimed. "What do you want here?"

Mark made no answer; as she fumbled with the scarlet-flowered robe, he suddenly advanced a step, swung his arm about her waist, and pressed his lips against her full, pouting ones!

Vanya neither screamed nor struggled, nor did she yield; her body was pressed rigidly against his by his arm, but her soft lips, except for their warmth, were as unresponsive as those of a stone statue. A moment only Mark held her, then he released her. She pressed her fingers across her lips and backed slowly away from him, sinking to the bed with her eyes fixed dazedly on his face.

"Well," said Mark, "why don't you call for help? Why don't you scream?"

"Scream?" said the girl dully. "Who'd come? Your friend Loring? Or Hong? Or Pearly Shene? Aren't you a paying guest?"

"She tried to shift the rage to cover her bare white knees. Mark made no answer to her words, but seated himself on the bed beside her. Suddenly he again drew her to him, bending her back across his knees; he leaned forward and once more pressed his lips to hers.

There was a violence in this second kiss that he had hardly intended; he was suddenly involved in his own plan in a manner somewhat unexpected. Vanya was rigid and unyielding in his arms, but somehow Mark felt, or thought he felt, a change in her. Then suddenly she was struggling, twisting, writhing in an attempt to escape from the circle of his arms. He withdrew his lips, and she lay motionless, her eyes closed, and her breath sounding in little gasps.

"Why don't you scream?" Mark repeated.

"Please," she said in a low voice. "Please—let me go."

By way of answer, Mark cupped his great brown hand beneath her chin, and holding her firmly against her struggles, kissed her again. And in the midst of this procedure, she ceased to struggle; she was passive in his embrace, and a curious and unexpected thrill moved in Mark's own being.

Had she responded? Had he imagined a scarcely perceptible flutter of the warm lips? He wondered, for no one except close Loring, could have read the real reason for Vanya's hauteur and coldness to him—that her attitude was a mechanism of defense against the love she feared. Out of the bitter circumstances of her life had grown the distrust of men that led her to erect her shield of disdain, and

HAVE NO MERCY IS STATE PLEA

"There may be some question you 'rent answer," He gestured toward Hauptmann. "But there is a man who can answer them. He will be thawed out, he is cold, yes, he will be thawed out when he hears that switch—that's the time he will talk."

At Wilentz's request the court admonished Hauptmann and his wife to make no outcry at anything he said.

Wilentz swept his hand toward Hauptmann's defense staff.

"There is nobody at that table who doesn't feel he is guilty. I don't care what they say."

He denied Reilly's contention "that the state had to prove Hauptmann was alone in the crime."

"He could have had fifty help him. If he participated in this murder that's all you've got to deal with."

"Might I ask," Wilentz addressed the court, "that so far as the defendant and his wife are concerned, may they have the right to proceed without any demonstration from that quarter?"

"You certainly may," said the court. "There is to be no demonstration or interruption of any kind, proceeding from any person. Let that be perfectly understood."

Quotes Text of His Own

The attorney general plunged immediately into his plea that Hauptmann be punished as the kidnaper and murderer of Baby Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr., and first off he matched Defense Chief Edward J. Reilly's use of the Bible text, "Judge not, lest ye be judged" with another.

"He that killeth any man shall surely be killed, shall surely be put to death," he quoted.

"For all these months since October, 1934 (when Wilentz entered the case), not during one moment has there been anything that has come to the surface of life that has indicated anything but the guilt of this defendant, Bruno Richard Hauptmann, and no one else," he went on.

"Every avenue of evidence," he asserted, "leads to the same door—Bruno Richard Hauptmann."

The jury, he went on, was "serving this country, serving this state and serving the country."

"We ask you to do your duty," he said.

"You can't compromise with murder or murderers."

"We ask for conviction of murder in the first degree."

Reilly's assertion, he said, that the jury must determine Hauptmann did the kidnapping alone was not the law.

The law, Wilentz went on, would support Hauptmann's guilt, if there were many persons involved.

"Still He Would Be Guilty"

"Let the defense bring in the dead body of Violet Sharpe and lay it beside him, let them bring in the grave of Isador Fisch, and still he would be guilty," he asserted, his voice rising.

The attorney general spoke again of Reilly's repeated efforts to implant doubts in the minds of "one, only one juror," so that mercy would be recommended.

"He wants to raise a question which one of you cannot answer and thereby engender a doubt."

He glanced toward the pale Hauptmann and gestured, "right there he sits, the man who can answer all questions."

There was acid in his voice. "He's cold. Yes, he's cold. But he'll be thawed out when he hears that switch," he sneered.

He turned next to the facts concerning the death of the child and denied as the defense charged that the state must prove the baby was killed in East Amwell (Hopewell) township.

"It had to be a fellow who had ice water in his veins. It has to be a fellow who thought he was bigger than Lindy, an ego maniac, a fellow who was secretive."

Hauptmann sat motionless, staring at Wilentz.

"The police of New York and New Jersey and the federal police have at last found this animal."

He flung his arm toward the defendant.

"We've found him and he's here for your judgement."

Hauptmann blinked and flushed. "Chief counsel for the defense says our case is too perfect," he went on.

"How do they attack our case? They attack the integrity of men of reputation some 60 and 70 years of age, sworn to do their duty."

"If the state is not on the level," Wilentz shouted, "the entire prosecution staff, Tony Hauck and Judge Large, are tarred with the same stick."

kidnaping on his death bed."

Miss Hanna Fisch was put on the stand, he said, just to show what Fisch's family was like.

Betty Gow, he said, swinging the discussion to the baby's nurse, had been brought at the last minute from Scotland—a $12 a week maid.

After her arrival in this country, he went on, all talk of her guilt ceased.

Colonel Lindbergh and Mrs. Morrow had not been "entirely spared" by Reilly, Wilentz went on.

"He didn't call them liars," Wilentz said, "but he said they might be mistaken."

Wilentz urged the jurors not to believe the defense "hokum."

"Just because a man comes in here with a mask of sincerity and has a reputation as a big lawyer, you don't have to believe him," he stated.

Swinging back to Violet Sharpe, Wilentz said that not only Mrs. Morrow, but four other witnesses, spoke of being with Violet Sharpe on the kidnap night when defense witnesses said she was in New York.

"But they were wrong, too. But they weren't ex-convicts, no idiots, no lunatics," he said sneeringly.

Hits "Movie Contracts"

He spoke scathingly of another feature of the defense case.

"Every woman who came here to this court has been charged with seeking a movie contract," he charged.

The unexplained footprint in St. Raymond's cemetery was discussed next.

"We had it," the attorney general declared, "ready for production any time the defense wanted it."

The photograph record was available, too, he said, but had not been requested by the defense.

Wilentz began to recite conversations from the record and finally jumped up protesting that looking was in evidence to support such a discussion.

The state, Wilentz explained, did not produce the footprint because it had been discovered four days after the ransom payment.

The record reviewed the story of the kidnaping, Wilentz declared, and the defense did not want it.

He lives in a "Glass house" but he's throwing stones at policies of Brain-trusters, and this fact has made Carter Glass, of Virginia, chairman of the Senate appropriations committee, biggest news figure in Senate. Him—self a newspaper publisher, he is seen in action at a press conference, answering questions on Committee's consideration of the measure framed by President Roosevelt, giving him authority to spend $4,800,000,000 as he sees fit.

Ostensively for purpose of getting cash to simplify settlement of his estate, and obviate necessity of dissolution of his banking house with his passing, J. P. Morgan is selling some of his most famous paintings. One (left), a portrait of Giovanna Torabuni by Ghirlandaio, sold for $500,000, with Edsel Ford as reported buyer. Determined battle is being waged by advocates of nudism for the right to practice their tenets in the privacy of their sylvan retreats, in New York legislatures, which is considering the McCall-Doodling bill to outlaw meetings of three or more unclothed persons of both sexes. Photos show Mrs. Morris Ryskind, of National Council of Freedom from Censorship, and Alfred W. Flynn, of Sun Bathers' League, making appeal in behalf of nudism, and typical scene last summer in the nudist camp at Newpoltz.

SAILORS LEAVE "SETH PARKER"

Four Remain with Owner, Awaiting "Hitch-Hike" Tow

(By Associated Press)
SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 12.—Nine of the 13 sailors who set out for an adventure cruise on the schooner, Seth Parker, were aboard the British cruiser H. M. S. Australia today after their rescue in the South Seas.

Phillips Lord, the radio impresario-skipper, whose trouble calls out before had brought the warship to the schooner's side and four others still were aboard the round-the-world adventure ship, apparently awaiting a "hitch-hike" tow from an American naval vessel, expected Thursday.

"Stony Silence"
The Australia, with the Duke of Gloucester aboard, stood by in what radio men here took to be "stony silence," while Lord continued to send out the messages that have distinguished his appearance on the air since he first reported his ship in trouble because of heavy seas.

In a message to the Australia he said the duke, the third son of the King of England, probably would be after him "with a shotgun." He wireless to the Associated Press voluntarily, a message describing how he was staying with the ship, in best maritime tradition, that four other crew men had refused to leave him.

Lord, known to American radio listeners as "Seth Parker," embarked on the now-celebrated cruise in 1933 to satisfy his publicly announced craving for adventure.

Await U. S. Navy Boat
Radiomarine here picked up a message that the Australia had advised the Parker she would stand by until the American navy boat arrived from Samoa, 800 miles away.

Early Sunday the Australia answered previous trouble calls from the Seth Parker but expressed "considerable astonishment," when it found nothing wrong and sailed off when Lord said he did not need help then.

Several hours later, the SOS went out and the Australia headed back to the rescue.

GOVERNMENTAL ECONOMY ASKED

Resolutions Presented To State Representative W. R. Phillips

reacting to the blood test for Bang's Disease.

In order to prevent the spreading of diseases of livestock through community sales, we urge the enactment of a law placing them under state supervision for disease control and requiring health certificates for cattle sold.

Miscellaneous
We favor an amendment to the container law providing that the grade must be stated when potatoes and other products subject to the law are advertised for sale by retailers and other persons.

We recommend that all relief be administered by local authorities.

We oppose any constitutional amendment that will deprive a county of at least one member in the house of representatives.

We urge the enactment of legislation providing for the licensing and strict regulation in the larger interest of the producer and the consumer of all milk distributing companies in Ohio.

We endorse the program of legislation favored by the Ohio Farm Bureau and Ohio State grange and ask our state representative to support it.

Lots of Members

CINCINNATI, O., Feb. 12.—Add depression reminders.

A group of Cincinnati business men announced the formation of a "million dollar club," one of the prime requisites for membership, they said, being the possession of worthless stock certificates.

Dazed by a blow on the head, and out about the face, arms, and knees, the man told Sheriff G. G. Auer he leaped from the train to escape three men who were "after him," but did not explain the purported attack.

He was placed aboard a bus for Cincinnati after he said the sheriff reported, he was enroute to Newport, Ky., to find work, and had relatives in nearby Bellevue, Ky.

"David Copperfield", One of Screen's Greatest, Now Playing At the State

"DAVID COPPERFIELD" is one film where adjectives may be used without the least bit of exaggeration. For it is high on the list of the screen's great pictures. The most popular of Charles Dickens' books is brought to life on the screen in a beautifully told, brilliantly enacted film—truly a production not to be missed.

A Year in Making
Behind this announcement is a story of research and investigation of unceasing effort, of faithful adherence to an ideal, almost without parallel in the history of motion pictures. More than a year has elapsed since David O. Selznick, producer, first announced his plans to film "David Copperfield."

As it stands on the screen it has a score or more of stars and featured players and for each one great care was taken in his or her choice. A trip was taken to England by the producer and George Cukor the director to familiarize themselves with the locale. There they were fortunate in persuading Hugh Walpole, the famous novelist and Dickensian authority, to come back to Hollywood to collaborate on the screen play. It is a story in itself to read how those men and their many assistants worked to make the film authentic in its players, its locale, its costumes and above all its story. Of a necessity some of the characters have been left out but all the prominent ones are present.

It is a faithful translation of Dickens' best known and best loved story, shortened of course. It deals with David as a boy and as a young man; of his troubles when his kindly mother marries again and of his few joys; then of his romance with the child-like Dora and his marriage to her.

Mother Marries Again
When David is eight his mother marries the stubborn Mr. Murdstone and David is very unhappy. He is taken to Yarmouth by his Peggotty family, among which is Little Em'ly. Later David's mother dies and he is sent to London to find work. In London he washes wine bottles in a dirty factory and lives with the Micawbers, a devoted but improvident family. However David is soon without a home for Micawber and his family are sent to jail because they cannot pay their bills. He arrives at Dover sick and tired and his Aunt Betsey, revealing a soft heart under a hard exterior, takes care of him. David is returned to health and goes back to London for a career. He meets Dora and they are married. They are very much in love but Dora, never strong, neglects her house and David finds it difficult to work.

She becomes very ill and Agnes Wickfield, a girl who had loved David since childhood, is with him when Dora dies. He wanders in foreign lands for a year and when a letter from Micawber brings him back to London he realizes that the one thing he wants in life is marriage to Agnes, who has loved him all his life.

Cast Is Excellent
The case is splendid all the way. Freddie Bartholomew is a tremendous hit as David; W. C. Fields is simply great as Micawber; Lionel Barrymore makes Dan Peggotty outstanding; Frank Lawton is splendid as David as a youth and Maureen O'Sullivan and Madge Evans are sincere and very pretty as the girls who love him; Elizabeth Allan is a touching Mrs. Copperfield and Basil Rathbone sufficiently villainous as Mr. Murdstone; Roland Young gives us a surprise by stepping out of his comedy roles and playing the very mean Uriah Heep unusually well; Edna May Oliver, Elsa Lanchester, Una O'Connor and Herbert Mundin are all good in comedy roles; Lewis Stone is grand as Mr. Wickfield and that still not all. There are Jean Cadell, Jesse Ralph, Lennox Pawle, Hugh Williams, Ivan Simpson, Florine McKinney, John Buckner and Hugh Walpole who plays the Vicar.
